

| December 2014 |

2Know

KM Newsletter

ROM News

- Integrating Learning and Development with KM - Link
- An organisation's weapon of choice - Link

01

Pondering on the verge of 2015

Another year has passed. Maybe it's just me growing old, but the years seem to fly by. It seems as if all is as was before. Luckily, concerning the Knowledge Management field this isn't true. This year had its surprises.

To full article

02

ECM Content Management systems in the age of portals

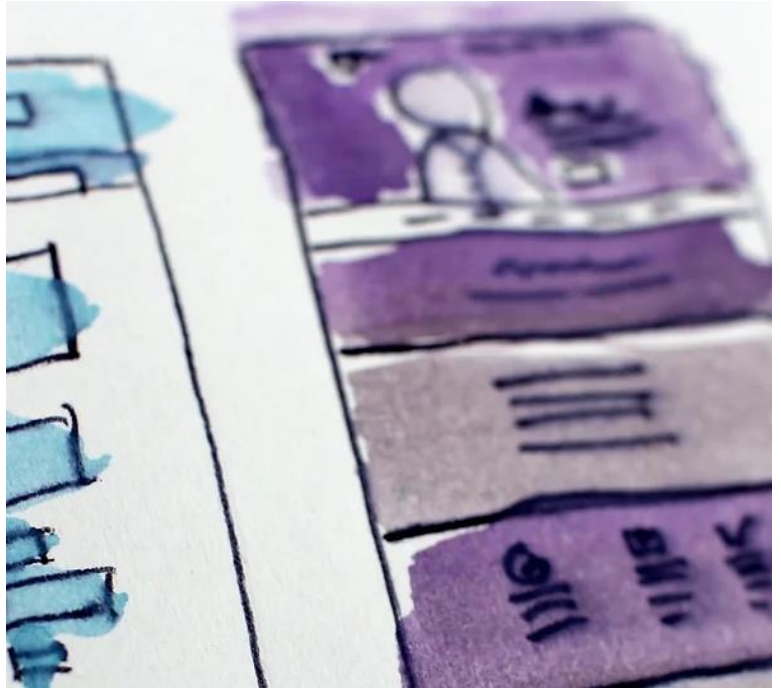

ECM systems enable centralized management, efficient retrieval, and cost savings for organizations dealing with growing volumes of content.

To full article

03

Are social professional websites possible?

Investing in design and user experience is crucial for professional websites. Incorporating social components and real pictures enhances personalization and user engagement.

To full article

To full article

04

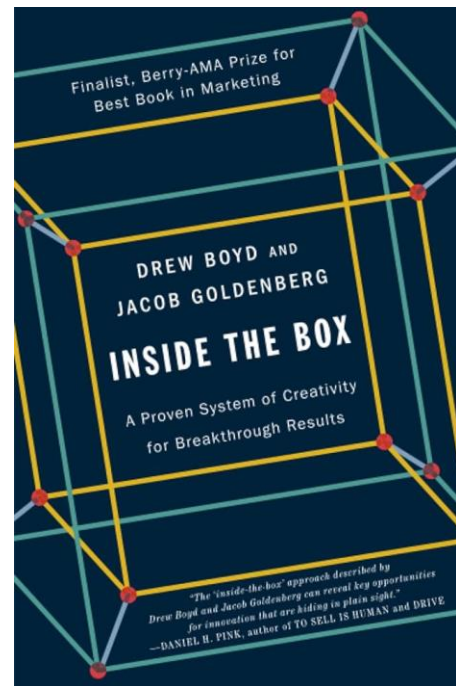

What is the relationship between Infographics, Business Intelligence, and User Experience?

The text explores the relationship between infographics, business intelligence (BI), and user experience (UX). It highlights how infographics can help convey data meaningfully to users, making decision-making more accessible. While infographics offer clarity, their creation requires effort and creativity. The text references various sources to support its points.

05

Inside the Box - Book review

"Inside the Box" challenges the "think outside the box" concept, offering a systematic approach to innovation. Authors Drew Boyd and Jacob Goldenberg introduce five methods: Subtraction, Division, Doubling, Task Consolidation, Dependency of Characteristics, and Resolving Contradictions. The book provides practical exercises and numerous examples, making it a valuable resource for fostering creativity and innovation in any organization. Highly recommended.

To full article